

UBC Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Health

Located in UBC's integrated health disciplines, the Centre will provide a single coordinating point for Indigenous health initiatives and collaboration with providers and communities.

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Three Critical Areas:

Research, Curriculum, Students

One Uniting Theme:

Partnership

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Key Priorities: Research

Collaboration with communities to identify research opportunities; use of research designs that acknowledge community priorities and expertise; a point of contact for researchers and communities seeking productive relationships.

- Research Driven by Community Needs and Based on Best Practices of Collaborative Design
- Research that Builds Community Capacity and Trains the Next Generation of Researchers
- Research that Builds Collaboration through Wide and Sustainable Networks

People, Knowledge, Partnership

Key Priorities: Education

Working across units to develop curriculum that is integrated and consistent, but responsive to disciplinary context.

- Cultural Awareness, Competence, Safety
- Indigenous Content for a Better Understanding
- Clinical Experiences with Aboriginal Communities
- Expanded Educational Opportunities
- Outreach to Communities, Organizations, other Institutions

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Key Priorities: Students

Developing the next generation of Indigenous health care professionals

- Effective Recruitment & Retention Across Faculties & Units
- Scholarships and Bursaries
- Strategies for Early Engagement
- Multiple Pathways to Success
(e.g. Certificate and Laddering Programs)
- Mentorship

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Partnership

With Communities

Defining approaches that are not impositions, but partnerships that draw on strengths

Among Disciplines, Units, Institutions

Developing interdisciplinary and inter-institutional relationships built on shared strength and shared goals

Across Boundaries

Working with international partners to share strategies, practices, and solutions

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Health

Advancing Indigenous health through partnerships, innovative thinking, research, and education

- Improving Wellness
- Improving Health Care and Patient Outcomes
- Supporting Indigenous Self-Determination
- Building Leadership

People, Knowledge, Partnership

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

We Want Your Best Thoughts!

Through the Website at

<http://health.aboriginal.ubc.ca/>

By email at

aboriginal.health@ubc.ca

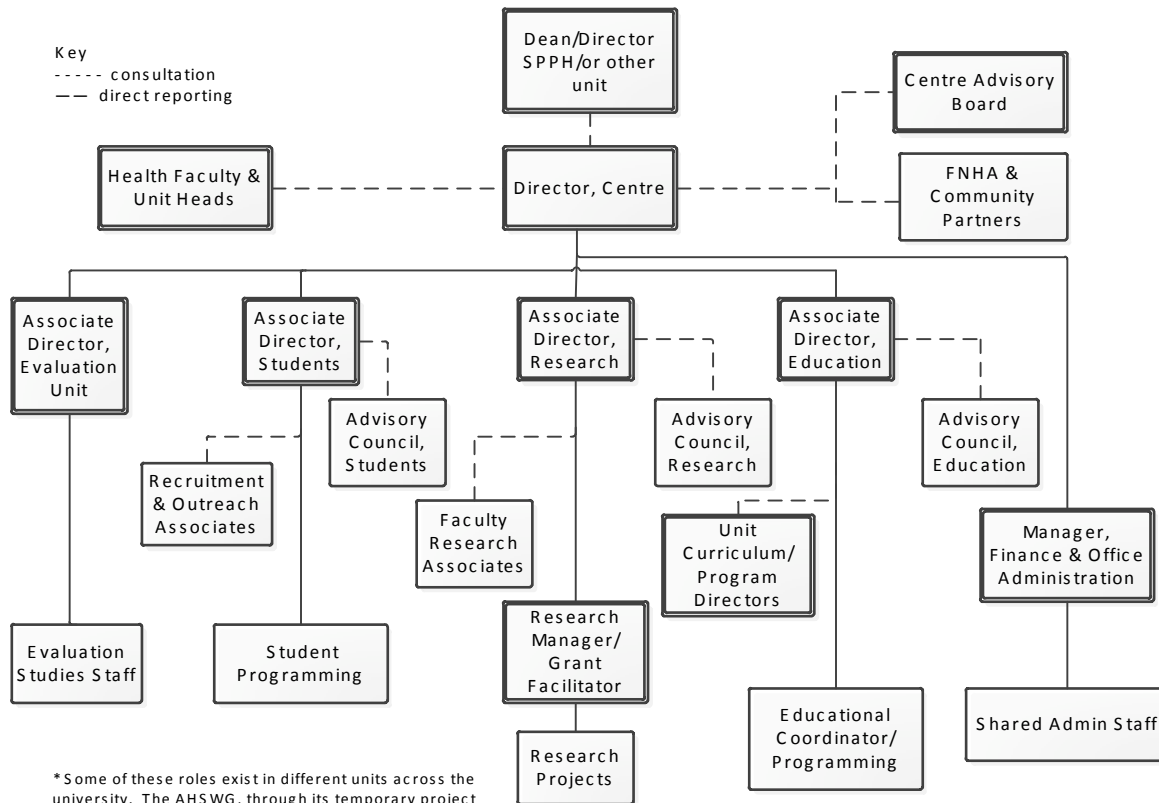

Thank you! Huy' ch' qu! Mussi Cho!

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Health

*Some of these roles exist in different units across the university. The AHSWG, through its temporary project coordinator will identify which roles are already funded and by whom as part of the environmental scan needed for implementation.

There will be student representation on advisory councils where appropriate.

a place of mind

THE UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA