The UBC Learning Circle is pleased to host two presentations from members of the UBC Aboriginal Health Strategy Working Group (AHSWG) and the Cedar Project Partnership.

The UBC Centre for Excellence in Indigenous Health is a new initiative dedicated to advancing Indigenous peoples' health through innovative thinking, education, and research. The Aboriginal Health Strategy Working Group is an interdisciplinary group of faculty, staff, and community members who have coordinated the development of this proposal over the past year. They are seeking your feedback on this proposal.

The Cedar Project Partnership is a collaborative, community-based research initiative that involves Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal researchers working with Aboriginal leaders. The multi-year Cedar Project is addressing the impact of historical trauma – specifically, parental attendance at residential schools – on health issues for this at-risk population.

Presenters include: Dr. Linc Kesler, Chief Kukpi7 Wayne Christian, Margo Pearce, and Vicky Thomas.
